GRAND VIEW HOSPITAL PLANS FOR GRADUATION

Exercises Are To Be Held In School Auditorium May 22nd

DIRECTORS ALSO MEET

March Was Not A Very Favorable Month For Finances

SELLERSVILLE, Apr. 14 — Commencement exercises of the nurses' training school at Grand View Hospital, will be held in the Perkasio-Sellersville High School auditorium on Tuesday evening, May 22nd.

Alvin C. Alderfer, president of the board of directors, will preside.

The baccalaureate exercises will be held in Trinity Lutheran Church, Perkasio, on Sunday evening, May 20th. Rev. Norman Ritter, pastor of the church, will be in charge of the services. Rev. Franklin H. Schlegel, of the First Evangelical Church, of Perkasio, will preach the sermon.

The directors held their April meeting on Tuesday. The report of Miss Nellie Hoffecker, hospital superintendent, follows:

"March proved a quiet month, although we were busy at times.

"The meeting for preparation for the lawn fete will be held at the hospital, Monday evening, April 30th, at 7.30 o'clock. Letters have been sent to the auxiliaries and various organizations, who work together to make the event a success.

"Plans for commencement are progressing and everyone is looking forward to this time with a great deal of pleasure. Have tried to divide the expense somewhat so that it will not seem like such a great expenditure at one time. We purchased the pins in March, the diplomas in April, leaving nothing but the incidental items for the class dinner, etc.

"The nurses' play proved very successful. The amount cleared will be around $100. One-half of the proceeds is donated for needed instruments in the operating room, and the other half will be used for the Senior Class gift to the hospital.

"We are beginning to think of National Hospital Day, and feel that we should begin to do our planning early. The date is May 12th."

The report of Paul Klingler, financial secretary, follows:

"Our financial status for the month of March did not improve. In fact, like the weather, it was a very unfavorable month. April is starting off much better and the deposits up to April 10th amounted to $1,400. As soon as the state check for the quarter ending February 28 comes through most of the current bills will be paid.

"In order to help meet this emergency the finance and publicity committee authorized a special mail campaign to persons not reached in the October campaign. Returns are coming in daily and we expect gratifying results. We have a considerable number of these appeals ready for mailing and if the directors will kindly turn in names and addresses of possible givers we will check the names with our lists and then forward the appeal. In this connection we wish to acknowledge the valuable assistance of Theodore H. Hallman, Souderston, in preparing the unique folder for this mail campaign and to thank him for his artistic efforts in producing, as a gift to the hospital, an unusually attractive piece of hospital literature.

"The Reading Engineering Works have had their men on the water tower job regularly since the advent of better weather and the assurance is given that with favorable conditions the work will be completed by May.

The balance on hand in the campaign fund is $2929.02. This money was given for specific purposes and is being used as promised to donors.

MUCH OPPOSITION IS VOICED TO CANAL PLAN

Cincinnati Not Favorable To Scheme of Trans-Ohio Canal

HAS MANY RAILROADS

(Note: This is the tenth of a series of articles on canal routes now under consideration in Pennsylvania and Ohio.)

By James C. Kinkaid
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
CINCINNATI, O., Apr. 14.—(INS).—Unlike other cities which have been selected as terminals for trans-Ohio canals, this city, the largest between Pittsburgh and St. Louis, on the Ohio River, has become a seething pot of rebellion against the proposed Cincinnati-Toledo canal.

Served by a mighty ring of railroads extending in every direction, industrialists and civic leaders have frequently voiced outright opposition to the scheme. However, there are still some who believe the Miami-Maumee River should be constructed and thus put Cincinnati on the Lakes.

The route extends from Cincinnati, on the Ohio River, to Toledo, following much of the old Miami and Erie Canal. The total length is 241 miles. On the southerly end of the canal there are two important locations available. One extends from the Ohio River up the valley of Mill Creek and joining the Miami River at Hamilton. The other follows the Miami River from its mouth, where it enters the Ohio River, 18 miles below this city. Above Hamilton, the Miami River would be canalized for about 65 miles except for short lateral sections through some of the larger towns. It would leave the Miami River at the mouth of Lormamie Creek and extend up this valley to Loramie, situated on the summit.

This would follow in a general way, the old canal route. From Loramie it would extend across the summit through Minister and New Bremen to the town of St. Marys and follow the St. Marys River for a short distance, then cross into the watershed of the Auglaize River, continuing along the old route but avoiding the built up centers of towns on the way. Just before reaching Defiance the canal would enter this stream, follow the river to its mouth and then continue down the Maumee River to Toledo.

Two long runs would be available on this route, one of 25 miles between Locks Nos. 26 and 27, north of Piqua, and the other about 23 miles between Locks Nos. 45 and 46, between Florida and Grand Rapids, O.

The total number of bridges on the proposed canal number about 190. Many of these would have to be considerably altered.

The area naturally tributary to the summit level is only 208 square miles. For feeding the old Miami and Erie Canal waters of the Miami River were diverted at a point above Sidney and carried to the summit by feeder canal. A similar plan could be used in this case, the diversion dam, however, being just below Sidney instead of above, thus obtaining the flow from 594 square miles.

It is estimated the water supply would be sufficient to maintain a flow of 600 second feet, the amount required, based upon 8,100 lockages per lock a year. The unit cost of supplying lockage water on this route is the highest of any of the four routes considered.

(The next article discusses what previous surveys have told about canals.)

CLASS MEETING

A delightful evening of games followed by refreshments was enjoyed by the Bristol M. E. Sunday School class taught by Miss Zula Warrick, last evening at the home of Miss Doris Mershon, 206 Otter street.

REED VOLUNTEERS ACTIVE IN BUCKS

The Reed Volunteers, a group of patriotic Pennsylvanians, have become quite active in Bucks County.

Richard A. Hopkins of Hulmeville is the active head and is supervising the distribution of campaign literature.

Mr. Hopkins—always an active worker for Republican ideals—thinks it is time for Bucks Countians to know the truth about what is going on behind the scenes in Washington.

The Republican principles as understood by the people of this state and fought for so valiantly by Senator Reed are becoming more vital every day. The centralization of power as is being advocated by the "Brain Trust" is against every American Principle and if we are to be delivered from it, stalwarts of the Reed type must be kept in the Senate.

The Reed Volunteers have gathered together excerpts from speeches made by Senator Reed during the last year to show his stand on all questions that are important to the National attempt of getting rid of the chain of depression that is holding back the natural growth of the country.

Everyone will grant that Senator Reed was right when he said to newspaper men: "The N. R. A. has been very hard on the smaller businesses in Pennsylvania. I find that the N. R. A. is resented both by farmers and consumers in Pennsylvania."

On December 7, 1933, Senator Reed said in a newspaper interview, "The largest creditor class in the country is the line at the pay window. Next to the line at the pay window is the persons who invested in insurance. As prices rise, it is as if an invisible hand reached out and took these things from them. The only gainer by inflation is the speculator."

In reference to the President's policies, Mr. Reed said, "I admire President Roosevelt. I have nothing but praise for the cheerfulness and courage with which he has carried on. But though we owe it to him, as a patriotic duty, to support him when we are sure he is right, we owe it as an even higher patriotic duty to the country to speak up when we think he is wrong."

At another time he said, "I think the N. R. A. has raised the morale of the country, and that it deserves praise also for having tended to abolish child labor in the south and sweatshops in the north. But the bill of rights as written in our Constitution cost human lives, and we must not allow those rights to be whittled away."

He advocates preparedness and has always been an advocate of an army for defense. In February, 1932, over the NBC network, he said, "Unless we are to place ourselves as a Nation at the mercy of every country that covets our wealth, our land, our trade, our climate or our civilization, we must be prepared to defend it."

In reference to European debts he said, "If Europe defaults, or if the debts are cancelled, that doesn't end the matter. It merely places the burden upon the shoulders of the American taxpayer."

The Reed Volunteers also have collected data showing that Mr. Reed has earned the respect and trust of all his colleagues, both Democratic and Republican, through his untiring efforts for Soldier Veteran Legislation. Every piece of veteran legislation in the last 10 years has been the direct result of his fighting. He has advocated relief measures for the veterans, then fought for them and in each case has won battles that without his effort could not have been possible. He is the author of the World War Veterans' Act of 1924, also author of the Disability Pension Act of 1930, granting allowances for disability not incurred in the war. It was a round robin letter signed by him and several others which forced the liberalization of President Roosevelt's regulations as issued under the Economy Act.

He introduced a bill and fought very hard for realization of the four-point program of the American Legion and is working to the same end with the Spanish War Veterans and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The Reed Volunteers are not working on promises of future actions but are advocating the return of Senator Reed because of his past performances. Every act has been for the welfare of the country as a whole, while Pennsylvania and its industrial activity has had the services of one of the most learned of men to represent it. His ability on the Finance Committee has been praised both by friend and foe alike.

FIRST CHECKS UNDER S. E. R. B. RECEIVED HERE

Considerable Delay Caused In Change Over From C. W. A. Program

WORKERS PAID TODAY

First checks under the new program of the Work Division of the S. E. R. B. were delivered today by the Director of the Work Division.

Due to the change over from C. W. A. to the S. E. R. B., there was considerable delay in Washington and Harrisburg in making the necessary financial arrangements, which were finally completed Friday.

The checks which are drawn on the Mellon National Bank, Pittsburgh, were not received until 6.30 in the evening. The staff of John S. Roberts, Jr., and Louis B. Gorton, disbursing officer, worked last night preparing them in order that the workers could be paid today.

In order to insure that the men would be paid, Joseph R. Grundy agreed to advance a sufficient amount of money to meet the payrolls. Checks against this account in the Farmers National Bank were prepared and were ready for delivery had not Federal funds been received.

New York, Apr. 14.—Art J. Smith, Philadelphia, commander of the Khaki Shirts of America, today faced a 10-year prison term. He was found guilty of perjury by a jury here, and sentence will be imposed upon him next Friday.

As the state's star witness in the murder of Anthony Pierro, at a Khaki Shirts riot in Astoria, L. I., last July, Smith was accused of having given false testimony in the Grand Jury investigation, naming Athos Terzani as the killer. Terzani was tried and acquitted.

STRIKE LIST GROWS

Philadelphia, Apr. 14.—With more than 11,000 men and women idle as the result of strikes infesting the Philadelphia metropolitan area, police doubled their vigilance today to prevent resumption of rioting at two affected plants.

Heavy lines of guards were thrown about two knitting mills as the plants opened to received workers who have refused to join the strikers. Violent fighting between pickets and police at both factories yesterday resulted in scores of bruised heads, and 62 arrests.

Meanwhile the ranks of strikers in the area were swelled by the walkout of 3,000 employees of the Viscose Company at Marcus Hook. The Textile Workers' Union called a strike in protest of alleged intimidating of employees. In Camden, N. J., the striking of 3100 employees of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation resolved itself into an endurance contest when the company officials ordered furnaces "killed" and the shipyard closed.

The Dutch elm disease which is causing much alarm in this country at present, was told of by Mrs. Griffith L. Williams. This serious trouble among the elms here was caused through a shipment of logs with Holland.

STILL 10,670,000 UNEMPLOYED

That there are still 10,670,000 unemployed in the country after a year of the New Deal and that the Administration is seeking to make it appear otherwise, is the contention of Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio. He says:

"It seems to me that Democratic Senators should have considerable embarrassment in giving assurances that recovery is here, in the light of all the facts that have been reported to us.

"Secretary Ickes announces that there have been a million people employed on public works, Director Hopkins announces that there have been 4,000,000 employed under the C. W. A., and General Johnson announces that there have been 3,000,000 employed under the N. R. A., making an aggregate of 8,000,000 people reemployed by the sharing of work, the spreading of labor, the shortening of hours, and by the Government's putting of money into industry.

"But when the head of the American Federation of Labor makes the statement that today there are 11,670,000 unemployed in industry, it is a very embarrassing statement if it is true, because that would indicate that the re-employment, in spite of tremendous expenditures by the Government in trying to take up unemployment, has not been substantially a success. So I should think that these facts would be somewhat embarrassing to those Democratic senators who announce with great eloquence that prosperity is here. On the contrary, I regret to say that all business in America today is being put to the severest test. While we all hope that there may be substantial recovery, it certainly is not here as yet, and the immediate prospect is not very promising, it seems to me. The peak of unemployment early last year was never stated at more than 14,000,000 and usually at 13,000,000. The figure of President Green would not indicate reemployment other than by shortening of hours and sharing of work."

THE WILL FOR PEACE

There are some persons even in the United States who seem to think that this country desires war with Japan.

Nothing, we believe, could be further from the truth. The United States never has been militaristic and is not so today. It has acted with restraint in connection with problems arising in the Pacific. There is no doubt that it would be willing to meet Japan more than half way now in settlement of pending questions and in minimizing the chances of war between these two nations at any time in the future. But it can not afford to be led into a trap or to go so far in its efforts to assure peace that a menace to its own security will be created. There is such a danger.

Americans do have a will for peace. They abhor war and favor peaceful settlement of international controversies. But they know that one nation can't end war and that for it to discard all defense means and substitute meekness as its armor would mean disaster for it.

The United States has proved its willingness to go as far as the other powers in an effort to make war impossible. And this, doubtless, will continue to be its attitude.

Spring poets also had a hard time.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., ..... This week Isobel Jewell received her seventeenth pair of moccasins as a tribute from the Shoshone Indian tribe in Wyoming.

Years ago, when the family lived near the reservation, Isobel's father, Dr. Lee Jewell, saved Chief Wolf Elk's son from blindness. Out of gratitude, the chief visited the Jewells, drew the outline of Isobel's foot and soon returned with an elaborate pair of moccasins. From then on, a new pair came every spring. Even when the family moved away he continued to send the gift. Three years ago the old Indian died, but now the son, Chief Black Horse, has taken up the tradition. Isobel still has all the moccasins.

always pays back, and writes another story.

The other day he showed up in a local newspaper office looking rather hollow-eyed and obviously at the end of one of his sprees. All the boys knew what was coming, but sat back and waited. Presently, the writer approached the night city editor, hemmed a bit and said:

"Do you suppose you could lend me two dollars? I wouldn't ask you for myself but my man hasn't eaten in two days."

If it's a girl at the Joel McCrea's, he will put a month's salary into a trust fund for the baby and will agree to spend the next vacation with Frances Dee's friends in Massachusetts. If it's a boy, Frances will put up an equivalent trust and will consent to follow Joel's preference and go to Honolulu.

It's an amusing situation that exists at the King's Club, one of Hollywood's midnight rendezvous. The featured entertainers are three handsome colored girls, sisters, two of whom go to school in the daytime and sing blues songs for the stay-up-laters at night. Each evening, the girls are brought to work by their father, a former colored preacher. Then he drives his car around to the back, wraps himself up in a blanket and sleeps until the last reveler has gone and the girls are ready to go home.

The collector for a local gaming spot came out to Universal the other day looking for an actor who had written a rubber check. He came out to the set of "Half a Sinner" (you saw it on the stage as "Alias the Deacon") and stopped to watch Burton Churchill rifle, shuffle and cut a deck of cards for a scene. Leaving a few minutes later, he said:

"I wanted to get a good look at that guy just in case he ever shows up at our place."

The funny part of it is Churchill is notoriously disinterested in cards and is a bad player. Before doing the Deacon on the stage, he went to Nate Leipzig, the vaudeville card manipulator, and painfully learned the art of rifling and shuffling.

A fashion Show Arranged For You

WE MUST be in fashion today.

Fashion reaches even into our thoughts and speech, into our every activity, into almost every incidental of our present-day background. Though elusive and constantly changing, we must be familiar with this force — if we are to hold our places as active members of a modern community.

To speak of young girls as flappers is to date ourselves as immediately post-war. Plush and mohairs would stamp the past on our home furnishings. And antiquated household appliances would continue to submerge us in drudgery distinctly unfashionable.

There is no better parade of fashion than that which is presented to you daily in the pages of this newspaper. Through the advertisements, leading merchants and manufacturers are telling you about fashions in living.

Hats and shoes now being worn, the better kind of household conveniences, the best values in foods, decorations, furnishings — each advertisement contains sincere and truthful news of the latest offerings of the stores. With the advertisements you can keep abreast of the times. You will find that it pays you to read them every day.

"THE LONE WOLF'S SON"

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS

Aboard the S.S. "Navarre," bound for New York, Michael Lanyard, reformed "Lone Wolf" and underworld celebrity, is reunited with his son whom he thought dead. The boy, "Maurice Parry," has followed in the "Lone Wolf's" footsteps, but Lanyard hopes his son's interest in Fenna Crozier, lovely daughter of the wealthy Mrs. Fay Crozier, will prove a good influence. Maurice steals Mrs. Crozier's Habsburg emeralds. Lanyard retrieves them for Fay. Detective Crane warns Lanyard to watch out for the vengeance of "Jack Knife," Anderson and "English Archie," two gunmen whom Lanyard exposed for cheating Maurice at cards. Shortly afterwards, the gangsters steal Mrs. Crozier's emeralds and plant them in Lanyard's cabin. Maurice saves his father by substituting imitations and secretly placing the emeralds in the purser's care for Fay. Notwithstanding Lanyard's innocence, Detective Plon is suspicious of him. Later, when one of "Jack Knife's" accomplices tries to intimidate Lanyard into stealing the emeralds and splitting fifty-fifty with the gang, Maurice appears on the scene, masked. He knocks the gangster unconscious, planting a string of pearls stolen from the notorious gold-digger, Tess Boyce, in the thug's pocket. Tess, in gratitude to Maurice for catching the thief, gives a dinner in his honor. Lanyard disapproves of the society of Tess Boyce for his son, but Fenna asks him to leave Maurice to her. Discussing the Boyce robbery, Plon informs Lanyard that the prisoner swore Lanyard and Maurice planted the necklace on him. M. Isquith, Tess's companion, compliments her on her progress with Maurice and Lanyard, adding that they will have them where they want them. Crane is suspicious of Tess' interest in Maurice. He surmises the truth about the Boyce robbery.

CHAPTER XXII

"It is your belief that this Etienne Carrel is an undertrapper of our smoking-room friends?"

"I'd bet money on it. If things hadn't turned out like they did," Crane pursued, studiously tamping his pipe again—to show that Lanyard was at liberty to look as he liked; he wasn't watching. "I'd've guessed they sent him in on you to put the fear of Satan in your innocent heart—figurin' maybe you didn't realize what an iron-clad combination you were buckin'."

On this, Crane paused with a frank grin for Lanyard, as much as to say: "Well, that's that. I've let you see I'm no fool, but well disposed. But if you don't think it's time to make use of me as a friend, if you prefer to keep your counsel yet a while, there's no harm done and something gained: we understand each other." To which Lanyard returned a smile of entire comprehension.

"And I'm keepin' you up, and you don't know what for yet?"

"I am not impatient—I who never spend a minute in your company without profit. You were speaking of Madame Boyce and her friends, intimating that you questioned their motives in making much of my son."

"They're a hard lot," Crane gravely nodded. "That little lady has never been known to do nothing for nothing. If she's pickin' up with your Maurice now it's for a purpose. She's as cold as they come—never been in love yet with anything but a big bank-balance."

"Oh, come now! Surely a little dinner, a social evening, is no more than a polite return for service rendered."

"You'd think so; but you don't know all I know. Let me tell you there's more community of interest than people dream of between the underworld and the high-steppers."

Now Mack's night life. Tess Boyce wouldn't last a week—burnin' round night-clubs and lookin' like Tiffany's show window, the way she does; she'd go the Jay Dot King way, and be found cold in bed some morning without as much as a rhinestone, if she didn't have protection, if she didn't stand in with the racketeers. Take this Isquith mug she's so thick with. Where'd he come from? Where'd he pick up his money? Who gave him his license to act like that, as if the run of folks were dirt beneath his feet, when he's trainin' all the time with Tess Boyce and her kind? If he was the heavy ass-tocrat he lets on, he'd rather be seen dead than in such company. What's this Sultan of Swat, or whatever his name is, taggin' along with the likes of Tess for? I'd admire to tell you."

"Please do."

"When I know for sure, I will. Just now, I'm here to tell you something I'm sure about. After you'd left that party last evening—"

"You saw me with them? But I looked for you before I came below and couldn't find out."

"Yeah; not bein' seen when I don't want to is part of my art. After you cleared out, somebody suggested a game of contract. They took a table in the smokin'-room and kept the stakes high and the liquor flowin'. The Pasha of Phut is a nut about cards; Isquith plays a mean hand; and Tess Boyce is no slouch; but the coin they let that kid of yours win was something sinful. The session broke up about half an hour ago; Isquith blew off to bed and so did his Royal Nibs—and pretty sore he was, too, bein' the big loser. Tess took your boy for a walk on deck—said the night was simply too divine for anybody to turn in so early."

"Awhile later I accidentally passed behind them while they were holding the rail down in a dark stretch of the boat-deck. If the young one's left ear wasn't blistered, it's a miracle—her red head was so near it. I heard her say: 'You're too smart, big boy, to let him put that line of bologna over on you. You know as well as I do, all this stuff about reformation is just election.' Then the wind got in my pipe and sparks caught her eye, and she looked around and saw me. So I ambled on and minded my own business. All the same, she'd seen me. So I came on down to wise you before she could broadcast the tip-off. By tomorrow mornin' they'll be smottin' me every minute—or else I'm crazy. I won't feel safe in passin' the time o' day with you above a whisper."

"But why?" Lanyard remonstrated. "What conceivable end has Mademoiselle Boyce to gain by poisoning Maurice's mind against me?"

"I might make a guess, but if it wasn't good, she could sue me for criminal slander. Wait till I know what this Fenna Isquith's right name is and what his Tan Highness is doing so far from home, and makin' whoopee with tramps—and maybe I'll tell you. But if it was my boy, I know what I'd do." Crane pursued, rising and giving Lanyard's hand a hard squeeze: "I'd yorn right into that line-up, edge Maurice out, and keep both ears open to catch their signals. Good night—and don't forget to look the door behind me."

If Lanyard lay wakeful till nearly dawn, mulling over the new questions which Crane's call had opened, the new aspects it lent old ones, and all to no profit; if he dropped off at length on no more comfortable finding than that he and his son both were dead tax his every resource to break, yet must be rent lest it strangle his hopes for Maurice and uproot his own life from the place in the sun he had struggled so to give it; if he turned up on deck, in consequence, hardly before noon, feeling as old as Time and as useless as an inferiority complex, he permitted nothing of all this to glimpse through his countenance.

And the face of the day, too, was unruffled, as fair as if it had harbored only happy ends for mortal cares—as fair as a pretty woman's smile, as Fay Crozier's for him when Lanyard found her taking life lazily in a deck-chair.

"How nice of you to turn up looking like that, so wise and kind, just when I'm feeling put-up-on and misunderstood!" A wave of a hand perhaps a trifle plump but still as young as her daughter's, consigned Lanyard to the vacant chair beside her. "Do sit down and tell me you believe with me that exercise is stupid, dieting a fallacy, and nothing one wants to do either under or immoral."

"Exercise is for adolescents, dear madame," Lanyard dutifully assured her—something for them to do with their bodies who have nothing to do with their minds. Diets are insults to any connoisseur of food with a fair digestion. Nothing is immoral except doing the things that bore one."

"Charming man you are," Fay purred,—"so understanding! That brat of mine has been giving me the devil all morning. It seems I'm a 'Felon,' 'madame!'"

"Well, potentially—because I wanted to duck the duty on those cursed emeralds, and still froth at the mouth every time I think how much I'll have to pay through the nose before I can land them. I shall be broke for months!" Fay wailed. "That wretched husband of mine keeps me on a rigid allowance, you know, and positively refuses ever to let me draw advances—never will get cured of the notion that tyranny is the way to teach me a lesson!"

"Why not land them in bond, then? The customs will hold them till you find it less bother to pay—" "And give up swanking it over all the women in Southampton next week? That's how much use you are!"

"Sorry." If Lanyard wouldn't trouble to look anything but entertained, he did offer to abandon the topic: "Have you by any chance seen anything of my child this morning?"

"He's somewhere about," the disgruntled lady shortly answered, "with Fenna. Taking exercise!" she snorted. "Just before you came up, they were pounding the deck together like a pair of monomaniacs—so many laps to the mile, so many miles to the hour! What they're up to now I haven't any idea. Anyway," she resumed, declining to be put off her grievance, "I've already wirelessly my bank to have somebody meet me on the deck with the money."

"May one, without the least desire to seem officious, venture to hope Madame dispatched at least one other message?"

"What about? What for?"

"In point of common prudence—for the protection of the emeralds."

Fay made blank eyes.

"But has it not occurred to you, madame, that—in view of the two attempts to steal them already—it would be well to provide against possible further attempts, which can now be made only after they have passed through the customs?"

"Don't be silly. The emeralds won't be out of my possession a single instant after we land. My husband's going to meet me; one of our own ears will take us to our town-house for the night; the next day we'll motor straight out to Southampton. And as you say, I've had two warnings. Anybody that thinks he can get those stones away from me now will have to do it over my dead body."

"And do you seriously suppose he would hesitate to? Surely the police news in your newspapers is such as to satisfy to that your new school of hold-up operatives seldom stick at murder?"

"What are you driving at, my friend?" Lanyard marked with relief a flicker of real dismay in the famous blue eyes. "Do you know something you haven't told me?"

"The reasonable inference from what you yourself know should be enough. These two attempted robberies—and particularly the bold and brutal nature of the second—surely are proof enough that your emeralds are being hunted by a gang of criminals as unscrupulous as enterprising. The third try will unquestionably be made at the first opportunity."

EGGS ARE HEALTHFUL FOOD, SUPPLYING THE NEEDS OF THE BODY

By Rhandena A. Armstrong (Home Economics Representative)

Springtime, with eggs a real food bargain, raises the question of what the egg contributes to body needs.

Eggs furnish excellent muscle-building material. In this respect they rank next to milk in the diet of the growing child. Eggs contain iron in a form very easily utilized in the body to help in building red blood. Egg yolk is one of the few common foods containing vitamin D in considerable quantity. This vitamin helps in hardening the bones. Vitamin A, which aids in protection from colds and infections, is also present, as are vitamins B and G, which stimulate the appetite and promote growth.

Eggs have the texture of almost every kind of dish and add richness, flavor, and delicacy. Eggs can be used in numerous ways for any meal—breakfast, dinner, and supper. For variety they can be served with different seasonings and sauces, poached on toast with tomato sauce, baked with cheese, creamed with ham and served on toast, or hard-cooked eggs may be used for sandwich filling. Omelets may be varied by adding chopped onion, chopped ham or bacon, or by folding in jelly, cheese, tomatoes or almost any flavorful vegetable or meat.

It is a mistake to think that there is no "how" to the cooking of eggs. Even in the simple process of boiling eggs there is a right and a wrong way. The secret of success in cooking eggs and dishes in which eggs predominate is to cook slowly at moderate, even heat.

County Librarians Will Gather in Doylestown

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 14.—Bucks County librarians will gather here on Tuesday, April 24th, an invitation having been extended by the Melinda Cox Free Library of this borough to conduct the Spring meeting of the Bucks County Library Association here. The first meeting will start at 10:30 a. m., and both the morning and afternoon sessions will be in the local library. The afternoon meeting will start at 1:45 o'clock. Directors and others interested are welcome.

An address of welcome will be made by Rev. George M. Whitenack, Jr., and the response by Miss Anna Jarrett, president.

Reports of libraries will be informal ones concerning some interesting thing attempted or accomplished, not statistics. Each library will be called on for a report.

Co-operative projects for libraries will be discussed as follows: "The Library and the Community," Miss Sasanna Young, Harrisburg; "The Library and the School," Mrs. Hilda Foster, Fallsington; "Bulletin Boards and Picture Collections," Miss Marion Smith, Yardley.

Afternoon features will be as follows: "Famous Lines From Poems Grave and Gay," Mrs. L. M. Montgomery, Farm School; "Book Friend," a playlet, pupils of the 6th grade, Doylestown school; "A Bear Story," Miss Janet McNair, Doylestown; "Local Material, What to Collect and What Not," Miss Florence Ridpath, Jenkintown.

Bristol Council was instituted 52 years ago, and Mr. Neely, who is now 78 years old, was the first presiding officer. In his address he referred to his boyhood days, when Bristol was a coalport town, and said he lived with his mother, in the old Beaver Meadow House, which stood on the site of the Elks' Home. He dwelt at length upon the early history of the Council and explained the influence which led to its organization.

Two other charter members were present, Dr. Joseph T. Stradling and George Vansant, both of whom spoke briefly. John P. Kesler, who was captain of the Fidelity Guards for many years, recalled pleasing reminiscences.

Doron Green, spokesman for the Council in its younger days, and who presented in its behalf many flags to the public schools of Bristol and vicinity, was also present to greet his old friend and co-worker, Mr. Green centered his remarks around Mr. Neely and his work in the building of a secure foundation for the Council, the evidence of which is seen in the fact that the Council is today the richest secret society in the town, being worth $31,000. He also paid a splendid tribute to Mr. Neely for the self-sacrificing character of his work in the early years, and his willingness to push the younger brothers forward instead of craving the honors for himself.

At the conclusion of the session a luncheon was served.

He dwelt at length upon the early history of the Council and explained the influence which led to its organization.

Two other charter members were present, Dr. Joseph T. Stradling and George Vansant, both of whom spoke briefly. John P. Kesler, who was captain of the Fidelity Guards for many years, recalled pleasing reminiscences.

Doron Green, spokesman for the Council in its younger days, and who presented in its behalf many flags to the public schools of Bristol and vicinity, was also present to greet his old friend and co-worker, Mr. Green centered his remarks around Mr. Neely and his work in the building of a secure foundation for the Council, the evidence of which is seen in the fact that the Council is today the richest secret society in the town, being worth $31,000. He also paid a splendid tribute to Mr. Neely for the self-sacrificing character of his work in the early years, and his willingness to push the younger brothers forward instead of craving the honors for himself.

Charter Member, Fidelity Council, is Honored Here

Thursday evening, Fidelity Council, No. 21, Fraternal Patriotic Americans, tendered a birthday party to one of its charter members, Robert Neely, Easton, who is the oldest living member of the local fraternity. It was also an occasion for the reunion of old members.

Bristol Council was instituted 52 years ago, and Mr. Neely, who is now 78 years old, was the first presiding officer. In his address he referred to his boyhood days, when Bristol was a coalport town, and said he lived with his mother, in the old Beaver Meadow House, which stood on the site of the Elks' Home. He dwelt at length upon the early history of the Council and explained the influence which led to its organization.

FLOODS ISOLATE TOWN

QUEBEC, Que., Apr. 14.—(INS)—Montmagny, a little town some fifty miles from Quebec, was partially isolated by floods today with many homes inaccessible and canoes being paddled through most of the streets. Gangs of workmen labored all night to build a temporary bridge across Station street which would enable pedestrians to reach the railroad station. The water in the vicinity of the station has attained a depth of almost ten feet.

BRISTOL H. S. XI GETS SEASON'S FIRST DEFEAT

(By Jack Orr)

(Ass't. Pub. Agent, B. H. S.) Coach Dougherty's Bristol High "Bunnies" received their first defeat of the season yesterday at the hands of the strong Doylestown High nine, in a thrilling game on the local high school diamond. Doylestown won by the count of 8-6.

The game was featured by a last-inning rally by the Red and Gray team netting them two runs but failing to tie the score.

With the score Doylestown, 5; Bristol, 4; it began to rain and the whole final inning was played in a steady downpour. "Chicken" Oppman started the seventh with a single followed by Rockhill's walk. Then John Hibbs, catcher of the "Bunnies", smashed a double to score two runs. "Johnny" Dick walked and promptly stole second. Spencer in an attempt to put sent the third out foul. With men on second and third and only one out Bristol still had a great chance but this was immediately halted as both Hibbs and Dick were caught off base and run down to end the game.

As the first inning began Doylestown scored a run on Capt. Gene Brickelmyer's screeching double to right center. Bristol tied it up on "Vic" Rockhill's single which Ament, Doylestown centerfielder, let pass him and Rockhill circled the bases.

Next came Bristol's home-run over "Jim" Spencer's home-run over the centerfielder's head. The Red and Gray held their lead till the fifth session when "Don" Wilson's single followed by Ament's triple and an error, gave the Blue and White two runs. Score: Doylestown, 3; Bristol, 2.

In the ending of the sixth round Bristol once more took the lead. "Man" Gibson and "Mel" Wright both singled, scoring two runs for the "Bunnies".

But Doylestown was undaunted. At the beginning of the seventh, Brickelmyer's third hit of the day and "Lefty" Fretz's triple gave the county seat team five runs and bringing the game up to Bristol's unsuccessful rally in the last inning.

Brickelmyer and Wilson led the Doylestown attack with three hits, while Rockhill, Hibbs and Spencer, each had two singles for the "Bunnies".

1933 SEASON ACTIVE ONE IN SPORTS HERE

(By T. M. Juno)

Bristol sports for 1933 came to a close when the Bristol Basketball League finished its schedule. The sport fans of Bristol were treated to first-class sports in basketball, baseball, football and pool. Competition in all sports were close and furnished all sorts of thrills for the spectators.

The 1933 baseball season saw three leagues in Bristol and vicinity, namely: The Lower Bucks County, Bristol Twilight and Bristol Suburban. The closeness of competition can be seen in the rating of the finished season.

The first half of the Lower Bucks County League was captured by the Hibernians who finished a full game ahead of Hulmeville. Hulmeville captured the second half and then came the thrilling playoff. Hulmeville won the first two games, principally through the hurling of Howard Black, Manager McDevitt, of the Hibernians, inserted Danny Hines in the third and fourth games and the converted outfielder pitched the Hibs to victory in both contests, evening the series. The final fray saw Watson in a match with Hines but Hines failed to finish and despite a gallant rally by the Hibernians, Hulmeville was crowned the Lower Bucks champions.

The Bristol Twilight League was much closer. The first half ended in a deadlock between St. Ann's and the Hibernians. In the playoff, the boys of Jimmy Dolan carried off the first half championship. The second half also ended in a deadlock, St. Ann's and Edgely being the teams. In the playoff, "Mike" DeRisi bested "Pete" Price in a hurler's match. St. Ann's and the Hibernians were matched in the playoff. The first game went to the Saints, 9-8, while the second saw one of the best games ever witnessed in Bristol.

"Mike" DeRisi and "Dave" Ennis engaged in a duel and what a duel it turned out to be. For fifteen innings neither side scored and then in the sixteenth frame, St. Ann's pushed across a tally to win, 1-0.

St. Ann's was next matched with the Hulmeville team. Hulmeville won the first game handily but were extended to win the second, 5-4. The first game saw an end to the winning streak of DeRisi.

The Cubans, a colored team, won both halves of the Bristol Suburban League although they faced stiff competition throughout. Many independent games were played throughout the season with most of the action being furnished by the Depression A. C., Washington A. C., and the Young Italians.

To top off the season, the league of officials of the Lower Bucks County and Bristol Twilight picked an all-star team and played a match against each other on St. Ann's field. The youngsters (Twilight League) surprised the fans by their gritty playing although they dropped a close 3-2 decision.

With the close of the baseball season, football moved in and again Bristol fans saw thrills galore. St. Ann's put on their team, followed by the Bristol Trojans, Young Men's Association and Furman A. C.

Inspired and guided by Coach DeRisi, the Saints won the championship of Bucks County and did not suffer a loss all season. Ten victories went up for the Purple and Gold and throughout the season, not one enemy crossed the goal line. The banner game of the season was against Doylestown.

No Bristol team had ever defeated an eleven from the county-seat and all Bristol was enthused by the matching of these two elevens. Doylestown was coached by Paul Lodge, former Ursinus backfield star, and had defeated St. Ann's, 7-0, in 1932. Preceding the game, the American Legion Cadets paraded with the St. Ann's team to the field and also gave drills at half-time. The largest crowd of the season saw the Bristol team chalk-up a 15-0 triumph and avenge the defeat of last season. To finish the season, the St. Ann's team swept the Sellersville Green Jackets, the only other Bucks County championship claimant, off their feet, 13-6.

A successful grid season was also enjoyed by the Bristol Trojans. Until they went up against the Frankford A. A. team, the Trojans, managed by Nat Vincent had not been defeated. Frankford Red Jackets next defeated the Trojans and then followed that night game at Hightstown which team completely routed the Bristolians. At this fray, the Croydon Cadets gave exhibitions between halves and were accorded quite an ovation from the crowd.

The Young Men's Association made their start with "Tommy" Smoyer, former Rutgers lineman, as their coach. The Y's did not enjoy a successful season but their defeats were close and considering the fact that the Bristol team was unorganized they did a good job.

The Furmans were quite successful. Playing against a much larger club in the Beverly Red Jackets, the local team was easily beaten in the opening match but from then on the Furmans put up stiff opposition and chalked up four victories.

The usual charity football game was not scheduled for the 1933 football season although St. Ann's made an attempt to stage a charity game for the benefit of the Harriman Hospital. Rain spoiled the contest which was arranged with the St. Matthew C. C.

Before the football season had closed, basketball got under way with the organizing of the Bristol Basketball League. Opposition in the wooden way was as close as in other sports. The Hibernians won the first half without losing a match. The Paterson Parchment Paper Company was a close second, losing but one match.

The second half saw a real race. The Hawks in its second match of the season defeated the Paterson Parchment Paper Company by one point. The Hawks had been defeated in its opening game and both the Paper Millers and Birds went through the remainder of the second half without losing another game so the result was a deadlocked finish.

Insult Under Guard To Prevent Suicide Attempt

By James L. Kilgallen

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
ABOARD S. S. EXILONA, AT SEA, Apr. 14—(INS)—Formally extradited and in the custody of United States officials, Samuel Insull was placed under a constant guard today to prevent a possible suicide attempt on his month-long voyage back to the United States.

Although pleased by Insull's new, cheery manner, the fugitive Chicago financier's custodians took no chances with the possibility he might try to end his own life.

Just before the Exilona sailed from Smyrna, Turkey, today, Turkish police, as their last official act, went through the 74-year-old man's luggage and confiscated all razors and other sharp instruments.

Proceeding along the same lines, Burton Y. Berry, young third secretary of the American Embassy in Turkey, and Capt. Wenzel Habel of the Exilona, announced Insull would not be left alone a single moment during the journey across the Atlantic.

The Exilona steamed across the Aegean Saturday, later to enter the Mediterranean Sea proper and head for Catania, Sicily, her first stop where she is due next Tuesday. The Exilona is scheduled to reach Boston about May 9 or 10 and New York a day later.

Capt. Habel waited until after midnight to set sail because he did not want to leave on Friday the 13th. Port regulations, barring any sailing during darkness, were waived to permit the Exilona to get away quickly.

BRILLIANT DETECTIVE WORK

ML. HOLLY, Apr. 14—A tale of tireless and brilliant detective work that would have done credit to A. Conan Doyle, creator of the fictional Sherlock Holmes, was disclosed here today.

It came with the announcement by Ellis Parker, chief of Burlington County detectives, who is known nationally as "the ace of main street sleuths," that the sensational murder of Bradway Brown, more than a year ago, has been solved.

The arrest and indictment of three men ended a painstaking and secret investigation that began January 13, 1933, when Brown, young and wealthy printing company executive, was found shot to death in front of the telephone at his home near Palmyra, N. J.

The suspects are in separate jails.

Katharine Cornett is the students' favorite stage actress, while Katharine Hepburn takes the honors in the movie field. Lionel Barrymore was named the most popular male screen star. Paradoxically, while students indicated they preferred membership in a national honorary society to a varsity letter for athletics, they voted George Spitz, N. Y. U. high jump star, as the man who did most for the university.

NEW YORK, (I.N.S.)—That the United States will become involved in a major war in 1936 is the alarming prediction of seniors of New York University's College of Arts and Pure Science, according to results of the annual questionnaire made public recently.

However, there is a blessing in the tail of the prediction; for the
